Veolia to repay its Hybrid Debt

Veolia plans to notify investors of its intention to redeem its deeply subordinated perpetual hybrid debt in Euros and in Sterling issued in January 2013, for respective nominal amounts of €1 billion and £400 million.

These instruments were issued to support the Group’s transformation, and were aimed at strengthening its financial structure, being considered as 100% equity in the IFRS consolidated accounts and 50% equity by the rating agencies¹.

Thanks to the success of the Group’s transformation and the improvement of its financial health, Veolia no longer needs these instruments and can save the associated coupon of €68 million per year, while maintaining an Investment Grade rating and significant financial flexibility.

In 2017, Veolia took advantage of extremely favorable market conditions to anticipate this repayment, which is expected to occur on April 16, 2018.
